Rich, round and perfectly balanced on the palate, this is a huge, big, fat, lush and exotic Riesling with an elegance and crystalline finesse that only Mosel Riesling can put against the rich opulence (or better: can lift). The acidity is perfectly integrated, and the wine is incredibly round, lush and intense, with very fine tannins that are a result of the basket pressing. Although it might not meet your expectations of a classic Mosel Riesling, I suppose this will become a legend one day. It is still a bit Burgundian, but this power, intensity and lush, elegant fruit, well... that's 150% Mosel. It displays the most remarkably custard-like combination of creaminess and almost chewable extract that I have ever experienced in a young Mosel. Like others of the best Fritz Haag 2005s, this Riesling manages to incorporate fresh, juicy nectarine, peach, lime, and grapefruit into its many layers of fruit concentrate, so that for all of its thickness and botrytised super-ripeness it remains invigorating and lip-smackingly refreshing. It also manages – again in the manner of the best 2005s – to preserve a sense of delicacy, for all of its ennobled richness and viscosity.
